A Clash of Kings is one of my favourite books of all time. As I may have mentioned, I am greatly interested in The War of the Roses. This book series is a war between the Starks and the Lannisters of the Westeros, and is loosely based on the war which took place between the Yorks and the Lancasters of England.

SparkNotes: A Clash of Kings: Key Facts

The maester stood on the windswept balcony outside his chambers. It was here the ravens came, after long flight. Their droppings speckled the gargoyles that rose twelve feet tall on either side of him, a hellhound and a wyvern, two of the thousand that brooded over the walls of the ancient fortress.

A Clash of Kings transports us into a magnificent, forgotten land of revelry and revenge, wizardry and wartime. It is a tale in which maidens cavort with madmen, brother plots against brother, and the dead rise to walk in the night.

So A Clash of Kings finds a variety of characters—young and old, rich and poor—struggling to either find or return to a role in the world where they can feel secure and of value. That's something we think everybody can relate to at one point or another in life, and a pretty good reason why we should care about this novel.

Secondly, for the quest at the tournament at ninestar, it appears that you always fight the peasant-grabbling Ser with a sword, which is nearly useless against his heavy armor. He on the other side fights with a mace, which is perfect against the provided heavy armor that I wear.
