In class, regularly turn students' attention to the visuals used in textbooks, on websites, and even in your own slideshow presentations. Have students describe the visuals to each other and make connections with what you're learning. Then have students create their own visuals of the content to further reinforce it.

When it comes to the classic accelerated learning techniques, let's explore more of the details that will help you choose based on the learning situations you find yourself in. Self-Explanation There are many ways to practice self-explanation, such as the Feynman technique:
