Twain seems to be alluding to this novel, though it is unclear whether he suggests that Tom has read it and is referencing it as well. While Tom has referred to many adventure novels so far, making another reference not out of the question, Twain's Huckleberry Finn is set roughly during the 1830s to 1840s. So Dumas's novel may not have been published before Tom mentions the "Chateau d'If," depending on the exact year in which this takes place.
