Learned that one the hard way. I worked long, hard hours, sacrificing three years of my life for a company, even forsaking several personal interests for the benefits of said company (by working overtime, usually unpaid), only to be laid off and thrown away the second there was a hint of a downturn with the business.

One of the cold hard truths about entrepreneurship is that you will be taken advantage of by some customers. Not everybody has great morals, or share the same values that you do. Some people are in it just for themselves and don't care if they hurt somebody along the way.

"[Kevin O'Leary] is a master at relaying the cold, hard truth to people, even when it makes them cry and stomp their feet. That's why the title of his new memoir, Cold Hard Truth, cuts to the heart of his philosophy of life and money, which really boils down to one thing: focus on making cash or get out of business."
