Opper's Silverwing trilogy has taken a little time to grow but is now one of the most interesting around, especially for boys of 9-11. The runty hero Shade has now become a father himself and is about to meet his young son Griffin - a boy bat who, ironically, feels himself hopelessly inferior to his heroic parents.

Kenneth Opper is the author of numerous books for young readers. His award-winning Silverwing trilogy has sold over a million copies worldwide and been adapted as an animated TV series and stage play.

Opper has created a new cast of bats, Griffin and Luna, to join the old favourites, Shade Silverwing and Marina Brightwing, and has developed Griffin as a character markedly different from Griffin's father, Shade. Opper has also created a unique Underworld, drawn in part from classical mythology, but distinctly his own.

Firewing continues the saga of the Silverwing colony, focusing on Griffin, son of the hero in its prequels, Shade. At first glance he'd almost seem like the opposite of his father, a trait made worse considering everyone else in the colony continually reminds him of the feats his father did (likely without knowing Shade was a loner at first, too).
