The politics of Hoop Roots is a "body politics," an intramural struggle waged on courts of play, in "the no-man's land of innovation," animated by the young legs and the "the rush of their skills" and made urgent by the respect the young selectively feel for their heady elders. It is a contest that is, alas, no contest, for "today's today" and "leg ball" ("[s]ignifying you don't need a brain to play it"), which is an in-your-face form of forgetting, seems to win ...
