The use of rape as a weapon of war and genocide does not begin with the act of forcible rape on a woman or a girl. It begins long before that actual physical act. It begins with how boys are acculturated, how society treats women, the rights that women have in society, whether they are equals.

While the history of wars and conflicts is replete with systematic incidents of sexual violence against vulnerable women, modern-day wars have witnessed large-scale indiscriminate deployment of rape as a "weapon" of war by combatants.

"Finally, sexual violence is recognized as a weapon, and can be punished," she says, adding: "We know now, as we knew even before the passage of this resolution, that rape is a kind of slow murder."

This essay examines how rape of women and girls by male soldiers works as a martial weapon. Continuities with other torture and terrorism and with civilian rape are suggested. The inadequacy of past philosophical treatments of the enslavement of war captives is briefly discussed.

Rape and sexual violence are used as a tactic of war in conflicts around the world. More and more, it is recognised that conflict-related sexual violence is not random or opportunistic. It is a strategy used by armed groups fighting in conflicts worldwide. Civilians — and particularly women and girls — are being targeted with sexual violence, used as a weapon of war, for a range of reasons: to persecute and destroy an ethnic group, as a 'reward' for combatants, or for financial gain.
