Robert Lewis Dabney: A Prophet for Our Own Times ...

Robert Lewis Dabney (1820–1898) was a Presbyterian theologian and educator who served on the faculties of UTS in Virginia, the University of Texas, and ATS. Those who knew him—both friends and foes—viewed him as larger than life, 'closer to a biblical prophet than a theological professor', writes Sean Lucas.

Dabney was a man of God who possessed keen insight into the changes taking place in postbellum America, and his razor-sharp logic led him to predict where the progressive train was headed. However, if Dabney was a prophet, he was a rejected one.
