To date, most research on immigrant women and labor forces has focused on the participation of immigrant women on formal labor markets. In this study, contributors focus on informal economies such as health care, domestic work, street vending, and the garment industry, where displaced and undocumented women are more likely to work. Because such informal labor markets are unregulated, many of these workers face abusive working conditions that are not reported for fear of job loss or deportation. In examining the complex dynamics of how immigrant women navigate political and economic uncertainties, this collection highlights the important role of citizenship status in defining immigrant women's opportunities, wages, and labor conditions. Contributors are Pallavi Banerjee, Grace Chang, Margaret M. Chin, Jennifer Jihye Chun, Héctor R. Cordero-Guzmán, Emir Estrada, Lucy Fisher, Nilda Flores-González, Ruth Gomberg-Munoz, Anna Romina Guevarra, Shobha Hamal Gurung, Pierrette Hondagneu-Sotelo, María de la Luz Ibarra, Miliann Kang, George Lipsitz, Lolita Andrada Lledo, Lorena Muñoz, Bandana Purkayastha, Mary Romero, Young Shin, Michelle Téllez, and Maura Toro-Morn.

Planet Typewriter is home to twenty-six Alphabeticans, ten Numericans, and a bunch of Punctuations and Signs. This planet of peace, love and harmony, is complete with the Italics – an 'Inking Hole' famous for music, dance and good-natured lampooning. All inhabitants work for equal rights and pay at their word factory, the Underwood. For the Alphabeticans, the Typewriter God is the Poet, and for the Numericans, He is the Writer. One planet, two Gods. Alphabetican's Ypsilon (Consonant Y) can't stop asking "Why?" she can't have the article 'an', despite forming words without Vowels. She claims that the twenty-one Consonant Majority are descendants of the 3500-year-old Phoenicians. The five Vowel Minority are Greek intruders. When Y hears about Epsilon (Vowel E, the standup comedian) garnering an overwhelming share of words in the Lexicon, she becomes paranoid about the Vowels' clout and her likely extinction. Soon, Y seeks divine intervention from a 'Great Dictator' who had ruthlessly eliminated the minority. Her ever-increasing hubris and hatred force the Vowels to seek asylum in Numerica – the land of the rival worshippers of the Writer. With the world of words silenced, the Poet abandons the Underwood. Will the Punctuations and Signs tilt the balance to prevent the war of wor(l)ds? Find the answers in Alphabetican, an allegorical satire that addresses the ever contemporary themes of fanaticism and intolerance.

In this delightful book on society's most debated institution, Shobhaa Dé writes about how and why marriages work-or don't. With her usual disregard for rules, she reinvents tradition and challenges old stereotypes, addressing all the issues that are central to most Indian marriages: the saas-bahu conundrum (how to escape the role-trap and enjoy each other), the need for honesty (aren't some secrets better left secret?), the importance of romance (no, expressions of love are not unmanly!), and not any less important, how to recognize the warning signs in a hopeless relationship and run before it's too late. Fun, savvy and, above all, pragmatic, this is the ultimate relationship book for all those who want to make the adventure of marriage last a lifetime.

A divorce and a succession of sordid affairs have left prominent Bombay socialite Karuna feeling battered, empty and melancholic. Scandalous, astute and utterly riveting, Shobhaa Dé's first novel, Socialite Evenings, laid bare the world of high-society India and changed the face of the Indian novel forever.
