defeat of the Spanish Armada did not put an end to Spanish sea power, nor to Spain's ambitions in northern Europe.

The middle years of the 1590s brought a sharp change in the emphasis of English policy in the war against Spain. The five or six years that followed the defeat of the 1588 Armada had seen English anxieties still focused predominantly upon the Spanish army in the Netherlands, as they had been ever since the Duke of Alba had brought that army into those countries in 1567.
